Amuda Mishra is the Founder and Executive Director of Ujyalo Foundation, a non-profit organization that focuses on sustainable development in Nepal by conducting programs that promote innovation, encourage social enterprise, and increase capacity building through community based projects and cost effective technologies. One of the initiatives of the organization is to create lighting systems in rural communities by turning wasted plastic bottles to "solar-bottle-bulbs".

Prior to Ujyalo Foundation, Amuda was one of the Clinton Global Initiative University commitment makers. As a part of her Clinton Global Initiative- Commitment to Action program, she founded 'Project Ujyalo', which focused on lighting up underprivileged communities in Birgunj using recycled plastic bottles. The main goal of the initiative was not only to light up homes but also to push innovative and community focused ideas at the grassroots level. Amuda believes that the best way to create sustainable developments is by empowering communities to become self- reliant. This initiative is what led to the establishment of Ujyalo Foundation.

Furthermore, Amuda has been working as a leadership trainer for more than four years training individuals in both national and international arena. Amuda was titled Miss Unity - 2011 via Miss Asian American Colorado, USA Leadership program.
